NOTES AND UPDATES

The Book of Intentions, once located on the lectern near the confessional, has been removed. Some people began writing very detailed prayers, including full names, medical conditions, family disputes, political comments, and even personal attacks. We will soon replace the book with a box that can receive written intentions on small pieces of paper. This will provide complete privacy, unlike the book, whose contents were public. The contents of the box will not be examined.

Following the recent theft and damage to our copper drain spouts, we have taken several actions to enhance the security of our buildings. We had already considered more exterior lighting for our complex. We have now jumped ahead with brighter lights on the north side of the church. We are also consulting with the Church of the Good Shepherd, our good neighbors, about coordinating our efforts to improve safety and security. The five spouts taken in the first "attack" remain missing. The Nashua Police Department, as always, has been most helpful and attentive to our situation.

On Wednesday, October 21, Officer Bill Adamson met with 22 parishioners to provide some direction regarding church security and safety during Mass. Everyone found his advice helpful. On Thursday, October 29, we had a follow up meeting with 12 parish members who want to help out with these concerns. We hope to schedule two people at each Mass to take responsibility for monitoring activity in the church. This also includes medical emergencies and so forth.

The new boilers and improved heating system are being installed in the Parish Center and should be completed soon. Finally, we will be freed from the ancient "monster boiler" in the school basement. Also, a beautiful new sign has been erected in front of the gym, giving us new visibility to people who travel along Main Street.

Revisiting the "Day of Wrath"

The Sequence (a special hymn) once sung or recited at Catholic funerals until 1969 has a terrible reputation because it begins with the Latin words Dies irae, commonly translated as "day of wrath" or "day of anger." Can you imagine anyone requesting "Day of Wrath" for a loved one's funeral Mass?

I feel sorry for the poor Dies irae because some Catholics ridicule and even despise it just because for its somber opening words. But there's so much more to it. We just need to get beyond its opening line.

Recently I discovered a very positive evaluation of the old Latin hymn from an unlikely source: the Westminster Dictionary of the Church (1971 edition), an important work of main-stream Protestant scholarship. The anonymous Protestant scholar described the Dies irae as "one of the most beautiful and moving hymns of the church." Fortunately, he or she had taken the trouble to read the whole hymn, not just the first two words.

For sure, the first six verses of the 20-verse hymn paint a terrifying picture of the "End." Verse 6, for example, says, "When the Judge takes his seat/and each hidden deed is made visible/nothing un-avenged remains." Whoa! This is clearly not a sentiment you'll find on a Hallmark sympathy card. But once you get beyond the sixth verse, the hymn has a very beautiful tenderness. The anonymous dead sinner, who "speaks" the hymn, "faces the Lord and says: "King of tremendous majesty/who has given salvation freely/You, the fount of loving mercy, save me!" The dead sinner then reminds Jesus that he had suffered and died on the cross to save sinners, not to destroy them. One translator, who freely embellished the Latin, rendered verses 9 and 10 this way:

Think kind Jesus my salvation
Caused thy wondrous Incarnation
Leave me not to reprobation.

Faint and weary Thou hast sought me
On the Cross of suffering bought me
Shall such grace be vainly brought me?

In these two verses, we hear the dead sinner's accurate perception of the Lord as kind, merciful, and totally self-giving to the point of dying on the cross so that sinners could be saved. The dead sinner, then, does not recoil in horror from an angry Judge eager to begin his spiteful tortures. Instead, the dead sinner looks to Christ with hope. In verse 15, the dead sinner echoes Psalm 23: "Grant me, please, a place among the sheep/and separate me from the goats/Your right hand holding me safely." Christ is the Good Shepherd, not Darth Vader.

Some people, of course, are totally put off by the hymn's eerie images of fire, ashes, groaning and moaning. But this unsettling -- and terrifying -- darkness serves as the background that makes the Divine Mercy all the more radiant and astounding. After all, God does not save sinners from a mild bout of the sniffles, but from total annihilation. God's mercy is truly grand and glorious!

The hymn's focus on Divine Mercy derives from its Franciscan origin. According to a long tradition, the Dies irae came from the pen of Thomas of Celano (1190-1260), a Franciscan who wrote two lyrical biographies of St. Francis of Assisi. Surely, Thomas's close friendship with St. Francis taught him to look toward death with joyful hope, not dreadful fear.
